NEW HAVEN ROAD OPERATING CHANGES. Policy of Organization and Concentra tion of Authority and Responsibility The New York, New Haven and fartford Railroad company has completed plans for the amplification of its policy of operating department or-ganization, and changes were an-nounced today which are intended to result in greater concentration of au-thority and responsibility on the part of the officers of the company.

Under these plans the operating department has been modeled similarly to the practice of some of the most successfully operated railways by reassigning its existing staff so as to provide concentration of direct authority and responsibility for the safe, efficient and economical operation and maintenance of the New Haven and the Central New England. The plans of organization provide further that the responsibility concerning standards and methods, including efficiency, economy and safety, is supplemented and methods, including efficiency, economy and safety, is supplemented by the action of the officers in charge of the various departments. This system permits the fullest co-operation among the various officials of the operating department in the operation and development of the property and for co-operation toward the improvement of the property and its service.

Under the revised plans of operation General Manager C. L. Bardo and Chief Engineer Edward Gagel report direct to President Pearson. The general manager in addition is to keep the vice presidents advised upon all matters connected with their respective ters connected with their respective departments.

Mr. Gagel has charge of all records of the properties, except land titles, machinery and rolling stock, telephone machinery and rolling stock, telephone and telegraph, and signal appliances; projects and reports; engineering work; new construction; and through the bridge department makes periodical inspections of draw and truss bridges, of the larger structures, of floating equipment except its machinery, and of such other structures as require similar attention.

Inspirations. Mr. Newland in his address emphasized these points:

The word—the thing we teach is important and it is essential that the people shall study alone the holy book. The Scotch people are on book. The Scotch people are an example of these who make splendid use of the book. The American home is forgetting the habitual use of the word of God. The teacher must through moral lessons change this order of things.

Another important point is the teaching of new ideas, teaching the word somewhat different than has been passed over and over again in the past. The teacher must find out what the people are interested in and sauge the teaching as far as possible to meet their separate individualities.

Teacher and pupils should have the get-tocether spirit and develop the ing to the safe, efficient and economical operation and maintenance of the properties. Both the division engineers and the engineers of lines, however, follow the instructions of the engineer of maintenance of way and the signal engineer in respect to standards and
